Interesting Data-

brings new money into Maine was pointed out by Harrie B. Coe, Manager of the State of Maine Publicity Bureau, in his annual report to that

This is not money that passes from one pocket to the other of Maine people, but comes from non-resident people. May not this be one of the reasons why Maine has not suffered from this year's business depression as have other sections of the United States?" Continuing the same thought, he said "Another feature of this recreational husiness which should not be overlooked is that that this is all new money attracted by the scenery and other natural advantages which we enjoy, an asset which we have with us always and which is in no way depleted, so that we can sell it year after vear." Aproximately 100,000 persons were served by the Bureau the past summer season. In addition, nearly 32,-00 letters of inquiry regarding Maine's attractions and hotel, camp and cottage accommodations were received. With Stick and Rudder TURNING un airplane requires coordination of bands, feet and eyes, and sense of balance in a munner so new to me that, after several pretty bad attempts, I felt certain I would never be able to learn. Thirty minates of practice proved my fears un-

"Today I want you to make turns using both attex and rudder," my instructor said Just before we started. "To turn right, lean the stick to the right and at the same time, push forward on the right foot pedal. When the plane has banked as much as you think necessary for the turn, Sring the stick back to neutral and hold the turn with the rudder."

I tried it in the air and felt clumsy when the plane unflowed suddenly. For a moment I could not tell where we were nor in what direction we were headed. Before I could become frightened I felt the controls move and my instructor spoke through the phones in my ears.

"Make both movements fairly slow and firm. Don't bold the stick over so long or we will continue banking into a roll. Now try it again, the other direction."

I let the mose climb in several sucreeding turns. In fact, in 15 or 20 minutes of right and left turns I unknowingly elimbed 1,000 feet. My instructor had been leaching the another lesson to watch horizon and my Instruments.

He took charge and spiraled down 1,000 feet after which I resumed prac-"If your turn is too shallow the ship will skid," he said next. "In a skid, note that your body sways toward the ontride of the turn and the wind strikes that side of your face." With that he turned in a shallow bank and I felt the blast of air and my hody hug the side of the plane. "If you bank too sharply the plane will ally toward the inside of the turn and you will feel the blast of air on that side of your fare."

We banked almost vertically and turned to the right. I felt the blast of air on my right cheek and my body swayed to that side. We were allyplug earthward as we turned. My instructor brought the ship back to level and turned around to look at mestudying my face to make certain his "examples" had made the impression he destred.

THERE never was a forest that bore a spangled tree, But every time that Christmas comes And what has set them glowing, or in what land they're growing,

I know not and I never knew—but I am very glad it's true! they're everywhere to see;

Oh, first they have green branches just like the pines that dwell Beside the noble forest of chestnuts by And over all that beauty a gradual beauty seems
To dwell among their swaying boughs
in immemorial gleams.

And now that I remember an old tale told to me— It is the land of fairles where grows the spangled tree, softly in December the loving

fairies crawl
Along the hard and snowy miles—
All laughter and all songs and smiles—
To set them in our hall.

There never was a forest except a fairy That grew a tree of greenwood all decked with moon and sun, And little stars and candles and oranges and cake, trumpels of the Christmastide for little childhood's sake, And so I'm glad I'm living where people are so fine

That in the winter season the tree that sooms a pine

I remembered clearly the day I had tost it, shortly after I first came to the South seas and how auxlonely t had searched for it near the stump of a pandamus tree where I had placed it with my clothes while swimming in the lagoon. I turned it over slowly, thinking of the days when that small instrument had exercised such teranny over my life, hurrying me out of bed of a morning, driving me punctually here and there throughout the day. FORGET IT

"Forgetting those things that are chind, I press forward," said Paul. lis reference is to those things that vere wrong in his past life, and to those things he had been compelled to sacrifice for Christ's sake. And yet, he did not forgot. He often refers in subsequent writings to his past life. He did not allow his regret to hinder him, however, and remorse was not in his vocabulary. In spite of the past, he "pressed forward." We indulge too much in introspection. We expend too much sympathy upon ourselves. We search the past for extenuating circumstances to excuse our present shortcomings. Many a has-been is useless oday and many a man who failed yes terday is a comer. . Good, bad, or indesterent, the past is irrevocable. Today is yours. Tomorrow is what you make it. It's up to you.

In Another Girl's Shoes

By SIDNEY BLAIR

MARJORIE ABBOTT almost ran along the street, through the carly morning crowds. She had just wrenched the heel off one of her pumps. She'd have to stop at the shoemaker's and have it fixed, and would make her into to the office -late, too, for all the other things that must be crowded into her busy day. She wanted to get in some shopping before late afternoon, when she was to have tea with Geoff; must get it in, in fact, for she wanted to look her very best. Not that Good would notice, in all probability. He never had seemed to notice what she was wearing in the old days back home. It was three years since she had seen him. He'd changed in lots of ways, most itkely, living abroad and traveling a lot and all that.

The shoemaker was lient low over i delleute little pump when Marjorte harried into his shap. She explained that she must have her shoe fixed at once. She'd had to walk the last half block with one heel off, and she couldn't tossibly go on that wast. Her show were rather square, low-heeled ones, but even so it had been difficult.

"But I can't fix that now, Miss," he told her. "I've got a rush order here-two rush orders-and my daughler's getting married this moon, and ive got to go home for that."

Marjorle looked at blm in despair.

"But what can I do?" she erled, He glanced down at her feet, and then reached to a tow shelf and held not a sine to her. It was a patent leather, silm, high-heeted pump, and a wide buckle made it seem even parrower and aliminer than it was "Try this," he teld her. "Inst allo It on: I think true oc."

"I opere wear about like that," she fold film. "I wear fact flot, low heeled ones," Anymay, it sen't mine,"

Lenient French Justice

Terrible cruelty to an aged father was charged against three pensant sisters named Merdier at Le Pey-en-Velay in central France. It was stated that the father had refused to share his property with his daughters, who confined him in the kitchen, and ployed such brutal methods in an defort to force his submission, and make him sign the deed giving them the property, that he died as the result. The eldest was given only a year's imprisonment, however, and the other two were dismissed.

Keeping the Secret

"Darling," said the elderly happily married man, "I'm going to give you such a surprise for your birthday." "Henry," she exclaimed wondering-ly, "do tell me what it is." He took her in his arms. "I'm going to give you a ten-dollar bill for each year of your life," "Henry," she cried happily, "that is wonderful of you!" And then sadiy: "But don't let anyone see the checks."

Weeping Willow Ancestry

A twig placed in a box of figs which was sent by a traveler in Syrin to Alexander Pope, English poet, is said by nurserymen to have been the uncestor of all the weeping willows is this country today, reports Retter Homes and Gardens

The twig, from one of the weeping willows beside the rivers of Babylon, was planted by the Thames and became a tree. During the Revolutionary war, a British officer brought with him a slip from this tree, which he gave to John Curtis of Virginia.

Curtis planted It, and the tree which grew from it still stands on the Curtis estate and is said to be the first weeping willow in the United States.

(Ct. 1739, McClure Newquaper Byngleaus) TF THERE ever land been any doubts in the mind of Al Koken as to

, why the slim flower girl named Dot Foverill had married him, he was not entitled to them. Dot herself, although too young to realize much of her own psychology, had hever treated him with any more than the affectionate noticitude of the very young toward one who is considerably older and henign. When Dot Peverill was twenty-one, on lovely as a jonquil, and with a volce that promised to be an operatic one, she developed a spot on her lung, There was nothing of the conventions al "anged" almut Al Koken. He was a fat, middle aged stock broker, who find come to know Dot through n friend of his, a business manager of one of the largest operatic companies in America, Her case was pathetic, ther, beauty appealing, and her plight appailing.

It was Koken's money that sent her to Arlzona for two years; it was the pudgy little hand of the fat old bachefor hat wrote out the generous monthly checks.

Dot's recovery was only partial. Her condition responded to the high, clean western air. Her health did improve greatly and the old beauty flowed back into her face. But at the end of two years, when she returned to New York to resume her work, the and truth revealed linels that there were only certain climates where Dot could thrive. The old lung condition began to reassert liself; she began to wilt egain.

Humbly, reverently, secretly and deeply in love was Al Koken. It is doubtful, had the return of Dot to a state of health been a permanent one, that this deep rooted love of Al for Dot would ever have found voice. He was a timld soul, kindly, naive to a degree that was incredible.

For a man of the world, at least ofthe world to the extent that a suceensful broker on Wall Street is bound to be, he was as uncomplex as a child in certain of the ways in which expect the average man to be versed, Al Koken had attained his bachelorhood the was fifty six when the met Dot) without more than a half dozen women having crossed his path, and those half dozen casually. There are more men like that in the world than we realize, chiefly because their stories are too ecenticas to project themselves.

The quality of gratitude that Dot Weverill gave Al Koken transcended even har own understanding. From performance for her. Hers had been the perilous and somewhat melodramatic position of a really beautiful girl, without parents, obliged at an early age to get out on her own. The gig of a voice anserting flacif had not made her position any casier. So many shings could have happened to Dot which did not, chiefly because then ohe was harely in her twenties a man of the calibre of Al Koken had prowiderstally crossed her path.

was as natural as the sunset dipping Into the Pacific or the beautiful goaring of sengulis about the castle-in-theair, or the sound of Dot's laughter before it became tinged with the pain and the ecstasy of what was happen-

Al, tied into a knot inside of himself with the pain of it, was conscious of the setting of the sun of his dream almost before the first shadows had come to assert themselves; Al knew that Dot and the young engineer were drifting and carrying with them lds happiness, almost before they knew it themselves.

And the heartbreaking part of it was that she fought so aminst it, struggled with her little strought; and yet from the first she was helpless. One who knows inner tragedy might surmise with what complete heartbrenk, what devastating wretchedness, but might have carried on her part of the compact with Al, had it not been for the delicate and subtle wisdom of the fat little man.

He saw it coming, and he braced himself; more than that, it was his initiative that was finally to bring about the collapse of his marriage. He made easy for these two young people that which without his assistance would have been intolerably difficult. He placed their happiness in their hands, He did the unthinkighte, he stepped out of his paradise that another might step in.

And yet in his heart, Al Koken's shrowdness again asserted itself. He knew that in reality, whether he remained in it or out of it, netunlly his paradise was finished. His song

Her adoration of Al Koken is something that has never diminished, but on the contrary has increased. Her picture still langs on his walls, "To my darling Daddy from a grateful Dot." The quality of her happiness with the young engineer is impeccable, There is but one fly in their ointment. As the bables come and the responsibillities grow, financial pinch is upon Sometimes Al wonders to himself why he does not settle upon the young pair a substantial life income, but in his heart he knows why. Every so often, full of sweet distress at her mission. Dot comes down to the little bungalow by the sea secretly, asking her incomparable friend for the largesse of a loan to tide them over a bad spot in their finances.

Al walts for these occasions a little relentlessly. To him, there is nothing in the world left to give him happiness but the sound of her voice appealing to hlm. "Dear Daddy-please-will you help us just this once more-"

for Public Ridicule If the history of the sunshade or parasol is one of dignity and more or less solemnity, not so the umbrella. Its development is attended by considerable ridicule and bilarity. The origin of the umbrella, that is, the use of a covering to protect one from rain, is somewhat obscure. It is said that in 1710 Marius of Paris invented an umbrella with Jointed stock, that could be folded, put in a case, and carried in the pocket. But it was not satisfactory and faded into obscurity.

In the Eighteenth century the umbrella became known and used all over Europe-Germany, France, Italy, Holland-and was sold on the streets of Paris by hawkers for from 15 to 22 England did not take kindly to the Good "Dentist" Gone Years ago a dentist sent out by the Hudson's Bay company had for his mechanic an Eskimo known only as "Siberian Mike." Watching the dentist pull the teeth of his victims, Mike soon learned to do it himself. When the dentist left the Arctic, Mike remained and became an itinerant tooth puller, In all these years he has wandered from place to place with his kit of forceps pulling out teeth for anyone needing such ministrations. Mike died recently in the Perry river region, his passing mourned in every settlement which knew him.-Capper's Weekly.

Never Requires Winding A wristlet watch that never requires winding-one is said to have gone for three years—has been invented by a watchmaker in Bolton, England. Inside is a small weight or balance; with each movement of the wrist the balance swings, and gives a turn to the spring. Although half an hour's wear is sufficient to wind the spring fully there is an arrangement to guard against overwinding. If put down for forty hours the watch will run down, but upon being put back on the wrist it will start ticking again.

Mount Airy, on the Rappahannock river in Richmond county, Va., was built in 1750 by Col. John Tayloc. The interfor, an well as the cornice, chimneys and roof, were destroyed by fire in 1814 and hastily restored with conalderation only for comfort and economy. The exterior is of native brown sandstone, with trim of fine white sandstone said to have been brought from England. The formal setting and character of the house and the monumental scale of the gardens suggest a European designer.

Primitive "Webster" Found What is claimed to be the oldest known dictionary in the world has been discovered in southern Syria. A French archeological expedition under the leadership of Dr. F. A. Shoot fer of Stradbourg made the find, The expedition has reported many important discoveries, principally in the ancient elly of Zapouna. The "diction ary" consists of large tablets of baked earth, some of which show an un-known script and intrange going back to about 1400 D. C.

Aviator's "Reckoning"

Dead reckoning means navigating, or laying the course, taking into consideration the following factors; Air speed of the plane, true course from starting point to destination, magnetic variation at start and at destination which would affect reading of compass, miles between start and destination, wind, its direction and velocity (this would affect speed and direction of travel of plane). Considering these factors, one would figure what the true direction would be; then, apply-Ing the comparative speed and direction of the plane and how much he would have to "crab" it to keep him on his course, he would get his compass reading for his flight to make it. That is dead reckoning.

Coarse Ancient Tales

Fabiliaux is the plural of fabiliau, which is one of a kind of short metrical tales, composed chiefly in the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries by the trouveres and told for amusement merely. Publicux are usually comic and satirical and strictly coarse, and are often cynical, especially in their treatment of women. They throw light, however, on the state of society and the manner of everyday life. Such are the fabliaux proper from which Boccaccio and other Italian taletellers. Chaucer and Mollere got directly or indirectly some of their ma-

Odd Musical Instrument The R. C. A. Theremin is a development of the Thereminvox, an invention of Prof. Leon Theremin of the Institute Physio-Technique of Leningrad. It is a musical instrument operating entirely by electrical circuits. It has no stops, keyboards, or any of the other mechanical contrivances with which musicians must labor. The music which can be obtained from the device depends "upon" the operator only, and the motion of his hands with respect to two electrodes, one for controlling volume and the other for controlling pitch.-Washington Star.

Bitter Comment on the Passing of George IV "The remains of what once was George IV have now undergone the process of interment," said an article in the London Times a century ago, reprinted by the Detroit News, "We have been charged with two offenses, diametrically opposite, in behavior toward the late king. One set of accusers will have it that we persecute his memory with the same hostile spirit with which we assailed his living reputation. Another party, reprouches us with mean sycophancy to the living, and still meaner malignity towards the defunct prince. It might be sufficient for us to state those inconsistent culumnies, and leave them to neutralize each other; but we disdain to shelter ourselves by such an evasion, and we give the flattest contradiction to them both. . . .

"The truth is, however-and it speaks volumes about the man-that there never was an individual less regretted by his fellow-creatures than this deceased king. What eye has wept for him? What heart has heaved one throh of unmercenary sorrow? Was there at any time a gorgeous pageant on the stage more completely forgotten than he has been, even fram the day on which the heralds proclaimed his successor? Has not that successor gained more upon the English tastes and prepossessions of his subjects, by the blunt and upairected -even should it be grotesque-cordiality of his demeanor, within a few short weeks, than George IV-that Levlathan of the haut ton-ever did during the 63 years of his existence?"

Sixteenth-Century Tale

Popular With Writers Faust and Faustus are different forms of the same name, and, according to tradition, the bearer of the name was a famous magician of the Sixteenth century, a native of Sunbia, an ancient duchy of Germany. A rich uncle having left Faust a fortune, he ran to every excess. He made a pact with the devil, (who assumed the name of Mephistopheles and the appearance of a little gray monk), that if he might indulge in his propensities freely for 24 years, he would at the end of that period consign to the devil both body and soul. The compact terminated in 1550, when Faust disappeared. His sweetheart was Margherifa, (Margaret), and his faithful servant was Wagner. The German poet, Goethe, has a dramatic poem entitled "Faust," produced in 1798, and Gounod, the composer, an opera called "Faust et Margherita," produced in 1859. The English dramatist, Marlowe, a tragedy based on the same tradition. for the saunders.

Landmarks It had been a very convivial remain dinner, and when the time came for the guests to depart Swith and Jones found that their last train to the subarbs had gone, and they were faced with a five-mile walk home. About an hour later, just as they had passed a church which had chimed out the hour of two, Smith broke a long silence. "Does your wife miss you when you are late on such occasions as this?" Involuntarily Esther looked back he asked.
